College Commencement Will End On Monday May 28 Here

Murray State College's 33rd Commencement activities will close Monday, May 28 with graduation ceremonies for 247 seniors and graduate students in the auditorium at 8 p.m.

Dr. Buell Gallagher, president of the City College of New York, has been announced as the principal speaker. Rev. S. Hughes Garvin, rector of the Grace Episcopal Church in Paducah, will give the Baccalaureate sermon Sunday, May 27, at 3 p.m. in the auditorium.

LT. Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield will be the main speaker at a banquet for the Alumni on Saturday, May 26, in the Carr Health building at 8:30 p.m.

Other events include a senior-faculty breakfast at 8 a.m. on Monday, May 28, the commissioning of the first full class of graduating ROTC students at 11 a.m. the same day, and a band concert by the MSC Band on the terrace of the Fine Arts Building that afternoon.

Various departments, including business, industrial arts, and home economics will have exhibits on Sunday and Monday, May 27-28. The art department will present the 14th semi-annual Jury Art show in the Mary Ed Meece Hall Memorial Art Gallery.

The commencement speaker, Dr. Gallagher, is president of the United States, CNY. He has his A.B. from Carleton College, his M.A. from the University of Wisconsin, and his Ph.D. from Columbia University. In addition, he has six honorary doctorates.

Dr. Gallagher who was born in Rankin, Ill., began his career as a minister and later became an educator. He has been a college professor and has held high office in the U.S. Office of Education.

The Baccalaureate speaker, Rev. Garvin, is a graduate of the University of Virginia. He received his bachelor's degree in divinity from Virginia Theological Seminary. He was born in Bowling Green, Ky., and received his elementary and secondary training in the Louisville schools.

Reverend Garvin is currently serving as president of the Paducah Ministerial Association. He has been president of the Paducah Community Church.

A total of 247 seniors and graduate students have filed for degrees. In addition, 85 received degrees in January to bring the total to 302 for the year.

The figure compares with 241 degrees granted to undergraduates and graduate students in the previous year, and with the all-time high of 356 in 1950.

Candidates for degrees, by home towns in this area are as follows:

From Murray: Marilyn Jeanne Ballard, Bachelor of Music Education; Robert Joseph Tuley, B.S.; Shirley Ann Cross Boone, B.S. in Home Ec.; Sara Calhoun Brooks, B.S.; Betty Carole Coddard, B.S.; Charles Haywood Ellis, Jr., B.S.; Teddy Franklin Lash, B.S.; Jennette Walcott Murdock, B.S.; Anne Christine Rhodes, B.S.; Ted Meredith Rogers, B.S.; Charles Lendell Johnson, B.S.; Luda Mae Johnson, B.S.; William Mac Jones, B.S.; James Gatlin Jordan, B.S.; John Anthony Kinney, B.S.; Billy Jean Smith, B.S.; Ray Myers Solomon, B.S.; Billy Harold Terrell, B.S.; Hugh E. Wilson, B.S.; Anne Thompson Wood, B.S.; Norman Bruce Crain, B.S.; Charles Wayne Mercer, Bachelor of Arts; George Edward Overbey, Jr., B.A.; Walter Edward Shackelford, B.A.; William Tazewell Sledge, B.A.; James Patterson Sykes, B.A.; Harold Bryan Tolley, B.A.; Martha Frances Watson, B.A.; Emily Jo Cathay, Master of Arts in Education; Jack Jones, M.A. in Educ.; John William Jones, M.A. in Educ.

Produce Candidate, Wetherby

EDMONTON, May 21 (AP) — Former Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby challenged Gov. A. B. Chandler and his administration to "produce" his candidate and permit him to speak for himself.

Wetherby said, "Joe B. Bates is the announced candidate but no one seems to know where he is or what he thinks about the issues of this campaign." Bates, who has the support of Chandler, is opposing Sen. Earl C. Clements for the Democratic nomination in the senatorial primary.

The former governor charged that "untruths and distortions" have marked Clements' opponent's campaign.

"The other day he (Chandler) said that there had been no acreage cuts in tobacco until Sen. Clements came to the Senate. I say to you that Joe Bates was in Congress in Washington in 1946, 1947, 1948 and 1950 and he said by while four major slices were made in tobacco production," Wetherby charged.

NOTICE

The Murray High School band will present a band concert tonight at 7:30 in the high school auditorium.

Everyone is invited and the admission is free. The concert is being held as part of the commencement week activities.

Hospital News

Friday's complete record follows:

Census 17
Adult Beds 60
Patients admitted from Wednesday 11:30 a.m. to Friday 4:00 p.m.

Mrs. Gerald Thwaitt and baby girl, Rt. 1, Almo; Mr. (John) Virgil Rogers, Rt. 2, Farmington; Mrs. Isaac Jones, Gen. Del., Murray; Master Jerry Keith Horton, Rt. 1, Paducah; Mr. William F. Davis, 206 So. 15th St., Murray.

Birthrate At Hospital On Increase

The birth rate at Murray Hospital increased 13 per cent according to statistics released today by the hospital for the fiscal year ending April 30. There were 511 babies born alive compared with 453 the year before.

Other statistics revealed that the average daily adult census was down 7 per cent from 344 to 324 although about the same number of adults were admitted: 2250 this year vs. 2259 last year. The hospital's administrator explained that the lower daily census was due to the ever shortening length of stay. This year's patient is apt to stay only about 5 days, he said.

Total number of operations performed was down 14 per cent, from 869 to 751.

The hospital employs about 70 people who earned salaries amounting to $140,000. Half of the employees are nurses or nurse aides.

Other supplies and services purchased cost nearly $75,000.

Bad debts cost the hospital over $6,000; depreciation on the building and equipment was over $5,800 and interest on the mortgage was $375. Total expenses were $230,000.

Higher salaries and the increased cost on everything the hospital buys has resulted in an ever increasing cost of operation. In 1950, it cost the hospital an average of $12.60 to take care of one patient for one day. Today's cost is $18.84. Although this seems high, Mr. Warming said, the average cost for other hospitals in our region is over $21 a day, according to statistics the hospital receives from official sources.

Orchestra Has Annual Banquet

Last Thursday the Murray Training School Orchestra staged its second Annual Orchestra Banquet. A theme of roses prevailed in the Murray Training School luncheon room as the fifty-two members and guests gathered at 6:30 p.m. for this year's occasion. Jim Thompson, Murray Training School Sophomore, served as Toastmaster, and Ralph Oliver gave the invocation.

Dinner music was presented by the Murray State College instrumental ensemble consisting of Mary Smith, Sharon Ballard, Ed Drake, and Bobby Lee Tibbs.

'Cannot Prepare'

AMERICA cannot prepare for the "miserable, hellish, nightmarish mess" of a thermonuclear attack in which as many as 50,000,000 Americans could be killed or injured, Civil Defense Administrator Val Peterson, showing during House government operations subcommittee hearing, told the subcommittee. No Facilities Leased Claims Mrs. Kilgore

NATURAL BRIDGE STATE PARK, May 21 (AP) — Mrs. Ben Kilgore, state parks director, said that rates have not been raised at any state parks and declared there has been no leasing of parks or facilities.

The new administration in Frankfort is proud of our state parks, she added, "but feels they should be run in a more businesslike way and become self-supporting."

She spoke over the weekend to members of the Natural Bridge State Park Association, which is backing improvements in the Red River Valley area in southeastern Kentucky.

The group has suggested development of the park, building additional cabins and pavilions and development of roads and highways in the area.

Mrs. Kilgore said her department intends to continue park development with its $225,000 annual appropriation, which she termed "adequate."

"With a successful season, there's a good possibility that we can float bonds against the parks to provide money for needed improvements," she added.

Free Concert To Be Given By College Choir On Tuesday

The Murray State College A Cappella Choir under the direction of Prof. Robert K. Baar, will give a free concert Tuesday evening, May 22 in the Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Building beginning at 8:15.

The concert features music ranging from the 16th century to the contemporary American musical scene. The public is cordially invited to attend.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Qualified persons who are interested in taking the Red Cross Swimming Instructor Course are asked to be at the Murray State College pool this evening (May 21) at seven o'clock.

To be eligible to take the course, one must hold a current senior life saving certificate. The classes will be held three hours each night this week, Monday through Friday and will be taught by Louis Gillispie, Kentucky First Aid-Water Safety Red Cross Representative.

U.S. Can Now Destroy Any City In World With Team

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
United Press Staff Correspondent
ABOARD USS MT. MCKINLEY, May 21 (AP) — The United States dropped a hydrogen bomb from an airplane for the first time Sunday in an awesome answer to Russian boasts of thermonuclear supremacy.

A B52, fastest intercontinental bomber ever built, sent the weapon toward its bursting point over tiny Namu Island in the Pacific proving grounds and then sped to safety.

Thus the successful experiment added a new team — the H-bomb and the B52 — to the nation's arsenal. It is a team capable of destroying any city in the world.

The light that shattered the pre-dawn darkness was greater than that of 500 suns. Its mammoth superhot fireball sent water and coral dust surging into a deadly radioactive cloud that spread 100 miles.

Newsman and civil defense observers who witnessed the explosion from the bridge of the Mt. McKinley 39 land miles away were amazed and appalled by the blast.

What Was Expected

But for the task force personnel who knew the bomb's anticipated power yield — estimated at 10 million tons of TNT — the spectacle was exactly what they expected to see.

In exploding the bomb at 10,000 feet after dropping it from a much higher altitude, the United States answered in deeds and not words Russia's recent unsupported claim that it was the first nation to explode a hydrogen bomb from the air.

Ever though the spectacular shot at dawn was the most spectacular in the current series of thermonuclear tests, task force authorities hinted the most important test was yet to come.

Now that it has been proved the B52 can deliver the hydrogen bomb, it was believed the next test will be an attempt to prove that the device can be delivered by guided missile.

Although no one said so outright, it appeared logical to presume that the next weapon to be developed and tested would be the H-bomb and the intercontinental ballistic missile because President Eisenhower has said one without the other is pointless.

Rear Adm. B. Hall Hanlon, commander of the task force conducting this year's nuclear tests, has said the H-bomb can be tailored to his needs.

Proof of the portable H-bomb's incredible power was burned into the memory of observers this morning.

But the United States is not putting all its thermonuclear eggs in one basket. It is building a large family — from small ones for knocking down enemy planes to even bigger ones than the giant exploded at dawn.

Newsman aboard this communications ship witnessed what was apparently a piggy H-bomb explosion 16 days ago at Eniwetok Atoll. It could be delivered easily by light bomber or a medium sized missile.

Yet its power was estimated at equal to more than 30,000 tons of TNT — a firecracker compared to today's monster but bigger than any weapon used in World War II and about twice as powerful as an A-bomb.

Other Important Weapon

Some task force experts said the H-bomb air drop, while the most spectacular, was not the most important test weapon scheduled for detonation at the proving ground this year.

About 10 more tests are scheduled before the series ends in late summer. The "most interesting shot" is scheduled for mid-June, the United Press was told.

What will it be? Security forbids its disclosure. Perhaps it is an H-bomb already tailored for the big continent-leaping missiles to come.

Informed opinion from expert sources put the power yield Sunday at 10 million tons or more of TNT but under 15 million.

The explosion was the climax of years of research and development, many months of technical toil out here and 13 days of sweating out bad weather.

SPORTS

- SPORT PARADE -

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Hagen, the first of the popular golf professionals, was a man who believed in high life, liberty and the happiness of pursuit.

"The Hags" ever had a bright eye for the "pitch and run" tours of pulchritude. Like most devotees of the 19th hole, Sir Walter appreciated what he calls the "hoot" or the "hyposonica," known variously as a belt, jab or snort.

"I usually just had a chance to squeeze the money for luck before going out and rounding up another batch," he reminisces in his new biography, "The Walter Hagen Story."

Money, to Hagen, was something to spend on the theory that you're only here on a short visit and you might as well smell the flowers. His check for $375 when he won his first British Open he gave to his caddy. Earning $3,000 in Canadian exhibitions, he threw a party after which he borrowed enough to get back across the border.

Lived Like Millionaire
"I never wanted to be a millionaire," he says in this bubbling book. "I just wanted to live like one."

Which he did, and still does. Yet golf owes him a tremendous debt. No man ever did more to popularize the sport and it was Sir Walter who broke the snobbery which excluded the professionals from the clubhouse. En route, he piled up a host of notable "firsts."

He was the first man to play a match using wooden tees instead of a pinch of sand; the first to play before a paid gallery; the first who needed ropes to control a gallery; the first whose knickers were pressed with cyano down the sides; first and only American to win the British Open four times; first to manufacture clubs bearing his name, and the first and only man to bring a bottle of champagne through customs in the British Open trophy case.

He regards the British Open with reverence, contending, after playing 3,000 courses from Australia to Zanzibar, that "No golfer is a true champion until he has won the British Open by conquering those windswept, seaside links."

Needed Hunting License
Here is a man who sliced so badly when he started that "I was in the woods so constantly I began carrying a hunting license." Yet in 1921 he shot a 62 which wasn't matched competitively for 24 years; once used only seven putts for nine consecutive holes; beat the immortal Bobby Jones 12 and 11 at match play and won two U. S. Opens, four British Opens and five PGA championships, four of the latter in a row. Once someone said to him:

"You have to be lucky to win a big tournament."

"That's right," Hagen said. "If you only win it once!"

Some of the great Hagen stories are passed over in his book but he does reveal that he began playing under the name "W. C. Hagen" and changed to Walter because the British galleries nicknamed him "water closet."

But maybe he should have stuck to "W. C." It also stands for "world champion," and no sport ever had a better one.

War On Cancer Is On In England, Halt Smoking

LONDON (AP) — The British Medical Association urged Britain's 40,000 doctors today to wage a strong campaign against smoking because of its possible connection with lung cancer.

The B.M.A. journal said doctors should induce parents and teachers to stress the dangers of smoking to children.

"There would seem to be no doubt that if young men and women today refrained from smoking cigarettes the mortality from lung cancer would drop sharply in, say, 20 years time," the journal said.

The journal printed what it called a summary of all evidence against smoking. It was prepared by Prof. Bradford Hill and Dr. Richard Doll of the Medical Research Council who first drew Britain's attention to the possible connection between smoking and a recent upswing in the incidence of lung cancer.

The summary said about one in 11 men 25 years old who smoke between 25 and 50 cigarettes a day can expect to die of lung cancer before he reaches his 75th birthday. However, it said there is no proof that cigaret smoking directly causes cancer, "but we believe the evidence is such as to denote a cause and effect relationship."

Big Wheels In Washington Do Relax

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, May 20 — What do the wheels in the government do after they put on the brakes at sundown?

The big fellows have various formulas for relaxing after hours. Sen. Estes Kefauver, who would like the Democratic nomination for the high office, is a putterer around the house. When he has time dabbles in electricity and carpentry and kind of invents

Passport to Happiness

CHAPTER 39
 DIRK TOOK Val back to the Carrarays' bungalow. It was a low white structure a little way out of the town on a curve of the bay. Both Jane and her husband gave Val a warm welcome and she felt immediately at home. As they drank cocktails out on the cool verandah, Jane deplored the fact that Dirk should be flying back to England so soon.

"You haven't even started to gather material for your book," she went on. "And John is as keen as mustard to do the illustrations. He has a number already done. We'll show them to you after supper."

"Anything fresh from England today, Dirk?" John asked. "I don't want to be nosy, but I noticed there was a cable waiting for you."

Dirk took a crumpled cablegram from his pocket and passed it across to him. John nodded and said, "Oh, so Mrs. Featherstone's relatives have decided to drop the case. They were trying to prove undue influence, weren't they?"

"They were," Dirk agreed. "But I think they knew they hadn't a leg to stand on. They would have had to prove undue influence by me at the actual moment Aunt May signed her last will, and at that time I was out of my gizzard."

"Jane laughed and clapped her hands. "Then all the money is yours unconditionally, Dirk? I'm so happy for you."

"Thanks, Jane." But he wasn't looking at Jane; he was looking across at Val. He said earnestly, "You'll have to trust me to do what I think best about the money, Val."

"What is all this?" Jane looked from one to the other of them in startled surprise.

"Nothing," Dirk said quietly. "It's just something Val and I know about." He caught her gaze and added slowly, "It's something you'll have to leave me to work out, Val. You have your own problem."

Val got up at noon after a restless sleep and when she asked about Cynthia she learned that she had been moved to her own home, accompanied by a private nurse. Later that afternoon she went down to the airport, with the Carrarays to say goodbye to Dirk.

He drew her aside for a moment before he boarded the plane. "I'll write to you directly I know how things are shaping up at home—and all the time I'll be waiting for you, praying you'll come, darling."

And then an official was shouting, "All aboard," and he took her in his arms and gave her a quick, tight hug. Then he was running up the gangway in the brilliant afternoon sunshine, the airplane doors were slammed shut, the gangway was wheeled away, and the plane rose in the air. Val stood beside Jane and John and waved until the glint of the silver wings in the sunlight looked no bigger than twin swords. Then there was nothing but a faint bright speck heading toward the Blue Mountains.

Val saw little of Bruce during the following days.

She gathered from the gossip which was as rife in the hospital as it had been on shipboard that Bruce was spending a great deal of time at the Feltons' bungalow and rumor had it that the handsome doctor had not only saved Cynthia's life but that he was definitely interested. She was his patient, of course, but his visits to the professor's bungalow were very frequent.

Some little time after Dirk had left she met Bruce in the foyer of the hospital. They were alone for the moment. The nurse at the reception desk had gone to lunch.

"Hello, Val. I've been trying to see you for several days." He seemed embarrassed.

"You had only to ask for me," she pointed out quietly.

"That's just what I don't want to do, Val," he said in a deep, worried voice. "I tried to explain the situation the other day. Matron Cameron is hipped on the

How To Dry Clothes In Bathroom Best

NEW YORK — Traditionally nothing annoys a husband more than a woman's wash clattering up the bathroom. But now, when clothes must dry, at least the drying can be done in style.

One good out-of-the-way drying rack can be attached to the wall above the tub, with bars spreading out to let the excess water drip into the tub. This can take care of a sizeable amount of personal wash and also is handy for baby clothes which always are in and out of suds.

New style towel racks also add a touch of style to the bathroom. The big chrome or plastic rings which attach to walls are excellent for stockings or small lingerie. One rack is made of wrought iron, with the part attached to the wall shaped like a musical staff. Outsize "notes" provide hanging space.

Rules To Remember In Cooking Cheese

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Cheese is a popular food because it adds flavor and nutritive value to so many different dishes.

But remember three simple rules when cooking cheese, says Margaret MacDougall, a food and nutrition instructor at Michigan State College.

First, keep the heat low or moderate. Cheese needs only enough heat to melt and blend with other ingredients. High heat, or too long cooking, makes cheese tough and stringy. Too much heat also may cause mixtures of cheese, egg and milk to curdle.

Second, add cheese to other ingredients in very small bits, rather than in one large piece. Small pieces mean shorter cooking time and easier blending with other foods.

Third, blend the cheese in a smooth sauce before adding to other ingredients, when possible. This prevents curdling. And you can use the sauce on cooked vegetables, in scalloped dishes, or combined with beaten eggs for Welsh rabbit.
